The Plan 10

Introduction

There is one statement being made by government and mainstream media that I agree with. There's no going back to what we know as 'normal.' However, I say this with a different intention in mind.

The 'normal' has been one in which the masses, particularly here in America, have traded truth for convenience. We have submitted to fear, believing that it is better to do so than risk inconvenience, confrontation and sacrifice.

We have been willing to close our eyes and turn our backs on centuries of corporate greed, government's continuous violation of our constitutional rights and civil liberties, public/private partnerships that place profits before people and 'democratic elections' that have become public auctions as a spectator sport. The present Covid-19 era is just another addition in a very long trend of corporations and the wealthy elite attempting to own our government.

Why would we want to go back to more of that?

Without an engaged citizenry, all we will have left is tyranny. Right now, we live in a time when we can stop talking about being spiritual, honorable, moral or ethical and, instead, become more so by embracing love, courage and compassion to become fearless, as fearlessness is one of the greatest spiritual principles we can embrace in any time.

Right now, we can invoke a huge rebirth, a paradigm shift to embrace the Grace, Beauty, Intelligence and Blessings, in the form of Nature, by choosing to heal, nurture and sustain our bodies holistically in alignment with Nature's bounty. We can decrease our reliance on synthetic and often risky medical interventions that do have their place, but only when inexpensive, effective alternative holistic therapies that get to the root cause of our lack of well-being have been exhausted. And we have a privilege, right now, of serving humankind by educating them in the same.

Right now, we can serve humanity by educating people in how, historically, the corruption of greed, when allowed to flourish unchecked, has always ruined humanity, and how, historically, love, courage and compassion have always won out in the end, being the key factors in bettering humanity in every way - so that we can become a society that values and embraces the common good, first based on reverence for our God-given rights.

And, right now, we have the amazing privilege of actually establishing a government that is for the people, by the people. And all we have to do is to get involved and become more fully engaged.

This, to me, is an even greater potential than the 'new normal.' It is the very real possibility of a new birth. So, why should we pine for going back to normal when we can have something so much greater for all?

It is in the spirit of the above, that I offer this plan for the Community Action Council, to secure governance by the people.

Respectfully Submitted,

Courage is Love in Action

"We hold these truths to be self-evident, that all men are created equal, that they are endowed by their Creator with certain unalienable Rights, that among these are Life, Liberty and the pursuit of Happiness – That to secure these rights, Governments are instituted among Men, deriving their just powers from the consent of the governed, –That whenever any Form of Government becomes destructive of these ends, it is the Right of the People to alter or to abolish it, and to institute new Government, laying its foundation on such principles and organizing its powers in such form, as to them shall seem most likely to effect their Safety and Happiness.

Prudence, indeed, will dictate that Governments long established should not be changed for light and transient causes; and accordingly all experience hath shewn, that mankind are more disposed to suffer, while evils are sufferable, than to right themselves by abolishing the forms to which they are accustomed. But when a long train of abuses and usurpations, pursuing invariably the same Object evinces a design to reduce them under absolute Despotism, it is their right, it is their duty, to throw off such Government, and to provide new Guards for their future security." ~ Excerpt from The Declaration of Independence – IN CONGRESS, July 4, 1776 – On Which the Constitution of Our Great Nation Was Founded.

Conflict is always an invitation to useful change. Therefore, this is a great and glorious time, a perfect time to enact this change, community-by-community, state-by-state.

In this regard, to secure the above in alignment with our Constitution and the conscience of the individual, we will need the citizenry to become fully engaged in their governance, something that we do not now have.

Human Contact and Solidarity

By convincing the healthy that they are sick when they don't have any symptoms - and by grossly inflating SARS-COV2 infection and death counts based on computer model projections, even when accurate, real-time numbers are available - and by breaking the economy that the middle class relies on - and by establishing a state of emergency with no clear designated end, our government has attempted to obliterate solidarity by making us frightened of each other! What better way to punish dissent under the guise of protecting us.

Why Do We Need Community Action Councils?

Currently, the checks and balances provided by our Constitutional Republic under the Constitution that is the highest law of governance in America have been practically destroyed due to the negligence of the public in allowing government to remove them.

This is not a matter of a 'system' being broke. Systems are made up of the people who design and run them. So, terms like 'it's the system' are used to distract us from demanding transparency and accountability on the part those individuals who are complicit in placing profits and personal gain above the people. Will we be ruled or will we insist on actual governance for the people, that is by the people? Because there is a difference in these two.

The Overrated Reliance On the Executive Branch

Article II, Sections 2 and 3 of the United States Constitution gives the Executive Branch the following powers only – it's a very short list.

- The President is the commander and chief of our armed forces and state militias.
- The President can grant reprieves and pardons for offenses other than cases of impeachment.
- By the advice and consent of two thirds of the Senate, the President may nominate Ambassadors, public Ministers and Consuls, Judges of the Supreme Court, based on Congressional approval - and can fill vacancies in Senate seats until the term of those seats expires.
- The President can give state of the union addresses and convene meetings of Congress on extraordinary measures, along with receiving public officials of foreign governments.
- The President can set foreign policy for developing relationships with other nations, including trade.

That's pretty much it.

In addition, the Constitution states;

Before he enter on the Execution of his Office, he shall take the following Oath or Affirmation:—"I do solemnly swear (or affirm) that I will faithfully execute the Office of President of the United States, and will to the best of my Ability, preserve, protect and defend the Constitution of the United States."

So, as with our entire government, the U.S. President has a duty to protect our Constitutional rights.

Now look at the above and ask yourself if current affairs in the Executive branch are in alignment with the very limited powers afforded to it. And is this branch of government actually engaged in protecting our Constitutional rights?

The public gives too much power to the Executive branch (particularly the President), a branch that has the least delegated powers under the Constitution. This has paved the way for Presidents and departments of the Executive Branch (FDA, DHHS, DOA, etc.) to successfully supersede the separation of powers designed to protect our Constitutional rights and to prevent big government from running amok.

They have done so by pandering to corporate special interest in which they take bribes in return for mandating legislation and issuing executive orders that actually protect corporate economic interests and provide for our tax dollars to be spent to support corporate and private economic interests.

Although well-meaning, most officials in this branch are not educated on the science of viruses/virology and toxicology and alternative, inexpensive, non-toxic therapies for treatment. Instead, they rely heavily on government bureaucrats to provide them with data from computer projection models, rather than data from professionals on the ground who are successfully treating patients and clients. These bureaucrats have kept their positions for decades by serving the special interest of big business and, in this example, Big Pharma.

In this way, corporate special interest and that of the wealthy elite often hold the executive branch hostage. We the people no longer have the greatest voice in our government. And the wealthy elite in both political parties work together for personal gain and advancement of their ideologies. So, this is not about democrats, republicans or independents. It's about protecting our God-given rights.

The Judicial Branch

Article III, Sections 1 and 2 delineate the powers of this branch, which are, in summary;

- The judicial power of the United States, shall be vested in one supreme Court, and in such inferior Courts as the Congress may from time to time ordain and establish.
- The judicial Power extends to all Cases, in Law and Equity, arising under the Constitution, the Laws of the United States, and Treaties made, or which shall be made, under their Authority;—to all Cases affecting Ambassadors, other public Ministers and Consuls;—to all Cases of admiralty and maritime Jurisdiction;—to Controversies to which the United States shall be a Party;—to Controversies between two or more States;— between a State and Citizens of another State,—between Citizens of different States,—between Citizens of the same State claiming Lands under Grants of different States, and between a State, or the Citizens thereof, and foreign States, Citizens or Subjects.
- Jurisdiction of the judicial branch is to the Supreme Court originally, and Appellate courts, unless Congress has provided for exemptions or other regulations.
- All trials, except impeachment are to be held by Jury.

The current practice in the way the Judicial branch functions far outweighs the powers afforded to it under the Constitution. For example, in the field of public health, the Justice Department has never brought cases against vaccine manufacturers when the manufacturer's own internal documents are made public, indicating that the manufacturer knew that they could spend pennies on the dollar to make the vaccine safe enough so as not to harm and kill people, and decided not to spend the money to do so.

Other examples include the bribery of our government in making violent behavior a public health crisis to enable Big Pharma to manufacture drugs targeted to low-income children and teenagers, particularly those labeled 'retarded' and those of color who have been labeled 'monkeys' and 'animals.' The purpose of these particular drugs and vaccines is to place their thinking and behavior under the control of health departments (for ex:

see the case of barbarism in the Willowbrook State School scandal in New York and the testing of Anthrax vaccines on children – just two of many examples). These drugs alter the human genome. This group of the population has been deemed unproductive members of society, therefore worthy of being experimented on at any cost. This approach is that of Eugenics which has been outlawed in the U.S. And yet, the Justice Department has never brought a single case against the individuals who have perpetrated these crimes against humanity.

Our judiciary is often engaged in the mandating and enforcement of unjust laws that provide for individuals and businesses to become agents of enforcement for the federal government and states.

One example is the federal and state mask mandates that have pressured businesses and schools into monitoring and reporting the behavior of people who refuse to wear masks. These are cases where public health departments are ordering police enforcement of mask mandates under penalty of fines and imprisonment.

Under Covid, these examples are many.

The Legislative Branch

The U.S. Constitution grants most powers of governance to the legislature, both federal and state. In this regard, our Constitution provides for the states to hold the broadest powers for governance. The powers granted to the legislative branch are so numerous that they are not summarized here.

You can begin reading the Constitution at Article IV to understand these powers.

Therefore, any movement to protect the rights of the individual and to foster health freedom should be focused on securing same in the legislative branch of government, beginning at the level of the state.

Special Interest Lobby

The challenge we have in our communities is fighting the corruption of greed that has infected the legislature.

Ours is a capitalist society. Big business operates with the understanding that corporations provide economies on which communities and states thrive through the development and sale of their products and services, in which people are also provided jobs.

Of course, the hubris of upper management and owners of these conglomerates is such that they forget that it is their often-underpaid employees who make their companies successful. In addition, corporate greed has fueled the notion that government is in debt to private industry for creating economies.

It's not enough and it is never enough that these conglomerates make, as their reward, vast sums of money. They believe they are the saviors of the people, rather than the servants of the people and, in this regard, they feel they have the right to own government. Again, this, of course, is due to the corruption of greed.

Lobbyists

1. For every member of Congress, there are 4 special interest lobbyists representing corporations.
2. These lobbyists call on our government representatives on a constant basis.
3. Corporations are still the primary source of the introduction of bills into the U.S. congress.
4. In order to get these special interest bills passed, conglomerates finance election and re-election campaigns, offer valuable perks to legislators and donate and/or offer grants to fund causes connected to legislators.
5. We, the people, introduce few bills to the legislature. In fact, it's unheard of that bills to be considered are presented for consideration of sponsorship by communities of citizens, even though that is our right.
6. In a growing number of cases (not all), conflicts of interest often prevent legislators from initiating bills on behalf of their constituents, even when their constituents press for the bills to be enacted. This is largely due to the rise of the career politician (who places keeping his/her seat as a higher priority to serving the people) and the decline of the statesperson.

7. Our government does not hear from us. Because this is the case, our legislators assume that we are in agreement with whatever they say and do.

The above list is just a sampling of what needs to be addressed, and this is why we now need to plan and execute the community action council.

THE PLAN
A proposed minimum of 10 citizens per Community Action Council (CAC) (can start with less – perhaps 5), with one CAC per every county of every state in the union.

I. Education and Outreach – the Citizenry

"If you don't know what your rights are, how do you know they are not already gone? You cannot exercise a right you do not know you have. If you are not exercising your rights, they are already gone."
~ Krisanne Hall, Constitutional Attorney, Liberty University

The citizenry is ignorant of the Constitution on which our Republic is founded. Most have not read it, nor have they read their state constitution and bill of rights that is based on the U.S. Constitution. Therefore, they have no idea of the highest societal laws that govern them. So, how can they even begin to protect such rights?

Therefore, a principle duty of the community action council is to begin classes, webinars, gatherings and other groups to teach people the Constitution and its efficacy for securing our rights and freedoms.

This simple training can be led by constitutional attorneys, community leaders educated in the constitution and constitutional sheriffs of the CSPOA (Constitutional Sheriffs and Peace Officers Association) or similar organizations. These trainings can also include group viewings of constitutional lessons readily available through platforms like Liberty University.

II. Education and Outreach – Elected Officials

The elected officials (who often need training in becoming public servants), many of who are our legislators, are also ignorant of the Constitution on which our Republic is founded. Many of them have not read it, nor have they read their state constitution and bill of rights that is based on the U.S. Constitution. Therefore, they also have no idea of the highest societal laws on which we are to be governed.

Given this fact, a principle duty of the community action council is to also begin educating state legislators and local law enforcement in the Constitution on which they have taken a sworn oath to uphold.

This can be accomplished over breakfast and lunch sit-downs with these officials in which they are graciously weaned on to direct knowledge of our highest, societal law.

This simple training can also be led by constitutional attorneys, community leaders educated in the constitution and constitutional sheriffs of the CSPOA (Constitutional Sheriffs and Peace Officers Association) or similar organizations.

In addition, it will be a priority of the community action council to pressure legislators to enact laws that require that government officials and law enforcement officers take a written, graded test on their knowledge of the Constitution, because no elected or appointed official can be expected to uphold and protect laws and rights for which they have no detailed knowledge and on which they took an oath of service. And officials who fail such a test should be required to take it over and over again until their grade is satisfactory – and the results of such tests should become a matter of public record.

III. Holistic Health and Health Freedom Education and Outreach – the Citizenry

Unfortunately, today too many people take better care of their cars and cell phones than they do their bodies.

The majority of U.S. citizens are still unaware of the many effective, alternatives to toxic medical interventions like vaccines and the many pharmaceutical medications that have become commonplace. Reaching for these toxic interventions should be the last resort when all other viable, alternative therapies have been exhausted. Instead, many people in America and across the globe are stuck in the mentality of a magic pill for everything that ails them.

Rather than applying effective methods for getting to the root cause of the health condition or disease, too many people are happy to simply focus on treating symptoms. In fact, in America, we have a sick care system, not a health care system. Ours is a system dominated by a medical field that has been focused on symptom relief only, rather than getting to the root cause for permanent healing of the condition.

This has increased reliance on toxic medical interventions that have made us a society of drug users and drug dealers. A society that promotes prevention as the first line of defense against illness is a society that will not become reliant on pharmaceutical medications. This, then, will destroy the economies built around our sick care system that have been placed as the highest priority in maintaining, ahead of prevention and cure.

Therefore, one of the duties of the Community Action Council is to offer, share, promote and support programs that educate people in how to care for their health holistically and as a matter of prevention, by way of lifestyle changes that are known to effectively address getting to the root cause of illness and lack of well-being.

There are growing numbers of doctors, scientific researchers and holistic health and healing practitioners with very strong track records of successfully helping people to reverse and heal chronic health conditions and diseases through lifestyle medicine. This approach includes holistic, cellular nutrition through eating real, highly nutritious food, restful sleep, proper exercise, intermittent water fasting, meditation and yoga, herbal therapies and other methods that amount to healing and prevention of dis-ease.

It is the duty of the community action council to foster education in these alternatives so that the citizenry is fully informed about all of the very viable choices they have for true health care, based on prevention and getting to the root cause of the ailment.

Health Freedom

The above goes hand in hand with the necessity to educate the public in what health/medical informed consent is, along with the fact that it includes the right to refuse. This form of education must include getting people to understand that trust has to be earned – whether that be trust in a doctor, medical professional, health/healing practitioner, or other therapist or researcher.

When it comes to health care, too often, people give their trust blindly without insisting on a complete understanding of the science (or lack thereof) on which the recommended approach/therapy is based. Doctors and health/healing professionals work for you and are fully accountable to you, and not the other way around.

For example, patients/clients have to be educated in how to vet the underlying science of any diagnosis and prognosis, before accepting and trusting it just because the doctor says so.

In this regard, informed consent and the right to refuse can only be supported when people have all the facts and have considered all sides of the 'debate' or 'argument' before exercising their right to accept or refuse any proposed health/medical intervention of any kind.

It's not their body, it's your body and, in the end, you are the one responsible for keeping it well, not your doctor or other health/healing professional.

IV. Holistic Health and Health Freedom Education and Outreach – Elected Officials

As stated above for the citizenry, most elected officials are also ignorant of the many, effective and non-toxic holistic therapies for treating chronic health conditions and diseases. Many of them only know what Big Pharma tells them. This can be easily understood by observing how our government has stood by and allowed chemical companies to poison our food and water supply with GMOs and other genetically-engineered poisons.

In this regard, many elected officials overlook or are not aware of the science that supports the alternative approaches to health, healing and prevention. Even now, some are calling for all such therapies to be outlawed, and some of that is due to pressure from Big Pharma to eliminate what they feel is the competition. Big Pharma can only thrive if people remain sick or are convinced that they are sick when they are not.

Therefore, another primary duty of the community action council will be to begin an extended education campaign targeted to elected officials, designed to give them a direct experience of how these holistic lifestyle approaches can improve their health and well-being permanently.

V. Education In How to Raise Candidates for Public Office

In America, we vote for the candidates that are presented to us. Our 2-party structure provides us with few alternatives for candidates and has created a polarizing environment that makes it almost impossible for bipartisan cooperation in protecting/upholding the Constitution and serving the common good.

Most citizens have never met their candidate in person or had a face-to-face discussion with the candidate about the service needed. Instead, people vote based on viewing video clips of campaign stops, campaign ads in popular media (media sound bites), flawed debates in which the debate questions submitted are controlled by the presiding media outlet running the debate, and/or peer pressure/discussions with family members and loved ones who have also had little or no contact with candidates.

This has fostered an environment where elections have become nothing more than public auctions. We, the citizenry, have allowed this to happen because we are not engaged in raising candidates who actually represent us.

Therefore, the community action council must be actively engaged in choosing and grooming people for office who will actually represent us and serve our needs, while protecting our constitutional rights and civil liberties.

What has just been described is what corporations and the wealthy elite do to fashion a government that they can control. This has resulted in modern day fascism.

So, community-by-community, we need to foster relationships based on human contact that can be nurtured in the context of raising states people for public office. It is foolish for us to simply wait to be told who the candidates are.

In this regard, there are advocacy training portals already in place that community action councils can utilize to become educated in how to raise candidates. Once the council has done so, it can go about presenting candidates to the public who have been raised from inside the community.

Part of this approach will include populating legislatures with citizens who are not interested in becoming career politicians but, rather, want to serve for a finite period of time in which to foster creative innovations to practical representative government.

VI. The Reading and Vetting of Bills Being Introduced to the Legislature

One of the primary duties of the community action council will be to assemble groups of citizens in the community to read and vet every single bill being proposed to the state and federal legislatures, before those bills get out of committee and are presented for a vote.

Legislators are often in the habit of reading 2-page summaries of bills, rather than reading the entire bill. Therefore, they are voting on bills that they have not even read.

So, we, the citizenry, better know and thoroughly understand what's in these bills, before they are voted on, so that communities can make their support or lack of it known to their public servants. Bills must be considered based on the will of the people, not the special interest and conflict of interest of a select few.

Once the community action council understands what's in these bills, the council can act accordingly in apprising the citizenry and arranging meetings with legislators to discuss support or opposition to the bill and what actions should be taken to represent the people.

VII. The Writing and Introduction of Bills by the Citizenry for Consideration and Sponsorship

If corporations, either directly or indirectly, are allowed to introduce the majority of bills to the legislature, why can't the citizenry do the same!? Of course we can. In fact, if we are going to complain about bills that are being passed into law, it is our duty to provide an alternative.

One of the best ways to engage a citizenry is to get the citizenry educated in the bill writing process, along with how to effectively have them introduced to the legislature – just like corporate and private special interest do now.

Therefore, it will be a duty of the community action council to engage local citizens in the education and engagement for introducing bills written by the people, for the people.

VIII. Foster Monthly Meetings Between the Citizenry and Elected Officials

Today, we don't have transparency and accountability in government because we don't demand it. Simply complaining about a problem is not useful. Engaging the problem is more useful.

Right now, our government is like a big ghost operating in the shadows. Who are they? What do they do with their time when they are 'on the clock.'? Who runs what and when? The citizenry doesn't know. And yet, our tax dollars pay their salaries and they are said to represent us.

In business, there are management levels designed to monitor what is required of the employees, along with the quality of their work. With respect to governance, that management level belongs to the citizenry.

Our elected officials don't hear from us. So, they naturally assume that we agree with what they do and say. Communities don't have a strong voice in their government because they don't insist on direct, human contact with their elected officials.

It will be the duty of the community action council to arrange monthly meetings (and more frequently as needed) with elected officials in their local offices and at the statehouse. Such meetings must be engaged with regularity to foster relationships with elected officials based on direct contact, so that communities are heard and the message is sent, "You will be seeing and hearing from us all the time." Only then will we even begin to have governance that is for the people, by the people.

IX. The Monitoring of Our Schools and Community Home Schooling

For all you parents out there, when was the last time you sat in on any of your children's classes to observe for yourself what your sons/daughters are actually being taught in school? The fact is, most parents don't know, first-hand, what their children are being taught in school. They only know what the child decides to tell them, or what the teacher tells them.

In fact, the parent has the responsibility for teaching the child whatever is necessary for the child to meet the challenges of life, including helping the child to develop critical, independent thinking. Schools are actually supposed to be adjuncts that exist to serve the parent's intention for the child's education, until the child is mature enough to make decisions about further education for his/herself.

This is not the case in our school system today.

Therefore, it will be the duty of the community action council to establish forums that represent the will of the community in how the school system must operate. This will include populating school boards with citizens who are not interested in becoming career politicians but, rather, want to serve for a finite period of time in which to foster creative innovations to schooling.

In addition, it will be a duty of the community council to foster alternative schooling by also developing a selection of citizen teachers who are themselves parents, to establish a community home schooling network.

This can be done to offer parents a choice in the education of their children through developing relationships with other parents who are teachers, while relieving them of the burden of having to home school alone, when faced with the challenges of reporting to work for a living.

Home schooling can present less of a challenge when, instead of parents or a single parent having to face the burden of schooling children on their own while also working a job or running a business, several competent teachers in the community can take up the charge of educating that community's children. In fact, this is the way in which schools like the Rudolf Steiner School first got started. Workers at the Waldorf-Astoria cigarette factory needed help in home schooling their children, due to their workload and the factory owner asked Steiner to create a co-educational school for the workers' children.

X. Community Internet and ISP

The Constitutional right to free speech is a central pillar of any democratic society. Without it, we have tyranny.

The level of censorship of our free speech on the Internet has reached epic proportions under Covid that is reflective of dictatorships under tyranny.

Doctors successfully treating SARS-COV2 infected patients on the front lines with effective, inexpensive non-toxic therapies have been censored on the Internet and had their licenses threatened or revoked. Why? Because Big Pharma cannot force a vaccine on us if the public knows there are more effective, non-toxic and inexpensive alternatives available.

In addition, world-renowned scientific researchers, virologists and epidemiologists are also being censored for questioning the lack of science, proper research and testing behind totalitarian Covid mandates.

Corporate economic interests have fueled the corruption of greed in mind control schemes to tell us when to think, how to think and what to think. This is intentional. The wealthy elite wants total socio-economic control of the masses. They believe they are the masters of our Universe and that we exist to consume their products.

The Internet is run by corporations of these wealthy elite and, in order to achieve socio-economic dominance, they have to control free speech. This is how fascism works. Therefore, in order to protect our free speech, communities need to have a direct stake in running the Internet.

Dependent upon how a state allocates broadband distribution, in many states it is possible for anyone to start and internet service provider company. This means it is possible for communities to own their own ISPs for the purpose of providing their own low-cost, freedom of speech Internet.

IT professionals living in communities can be engaged to build web browsers like duckduckgo that provide for uncensored search that is not monitored and manipulated in any way by corporate interests, thus ensuring that the Internet remains open and transparent.

Costs for community ISP startups are being researched right now.

XI. The Monitoring and Prevention of Corporate Campaigns to Privatize Public Resources

The era of GMO foods has evidenced the fact that corporations have made repeated attempts to privatize our food supply. One only needs to read the transcripts of the court cases brought against Monsanto to understand this.

Under Covid, some government officials have floated the notion that organic whole foods will be infected with SARS-COV2, as further justification for genetically-engineered foods that are made with carcinogenic herbicides and pesticides like glyphosate. Such a declaration can lead to the same indemnification against all lawsuits that vaccine manufacturers now enjoy, thanks to our Congress and Supreme Court.

If these companies are granted the power to control our food supply under the PREP Act and state emergency acts under Covid, eventually they will own the food supply. This will be their pushback on huge losses on their GMO product due to increased public awareness and successful litigation against them.

As another of many examples, corporate pressure on government to privatize our water supply has reached a critical mass, with some elected officials in the U.S. now considering the introduction of bills to enact laws for same. They have tried this in other countries and you may be interested in viewing the documentary report of Bechtel’s attempt to own the water supply in Bolivia.

After the Bolivian government transferred ownership of the country’s water supply to Bechtel, Bechtel successfully lobbied the Bolivian government to outlaw the collection of rainwater by farmers who could not afford to purchase water from Bechtel and were collecting it to water their crops. You can view the story in a posted documentary "The Corporation" here (starting at 1:40:00 – 1:45:00)

https://communityhealthfreedom.org/movies-of-the-week/

Another case is that of the genetically-modified mosquitoes that were recently unleashed in the state of Florida by Bio Tech companies who had obtained the backing of the state to do so.

Conglomerates are always looking to increase their market share by lobbying governments to back their proposals. The problem is there is no incentive to enact the proper testing and safety measures to ensure no harm to the public. Instead, we have become the guinea pigs for testing their product.

For these reasons (and more), it will be a duty of the Community Action Council to engage in community resource management, in order to monitor corporate special interest and lobbying campaigns designed to privatize our natural resources that belong to all, so that these attempts can be preempted.

IMAGINE THIS

If we have one CAC in every county of every state in the union, we will far outnumber the total number of corporate, special interest lobbyists in Congress and the state houses combined!
